Contents. Vol. 1. Memoir, wanting. 2. Early miscellaneous papers. On heat, light, and combinations of light, with new theory of respiration. — On generation of oxygen gas and causes of colors of organic beings. — Extract of letter to Mr. Nicholson on certain facts relating to heat and light, and on discovery of decomp. of carbonate and sulphate of ammonia. — On appearances prod. by collision of steel and hard bodies. — Experiments on silex composing epidermis, or external bark. — Experiments made with galvanic apparatus of Sig. Volta. — Observ. on causes of galvanic phænomena, on certain modes of increasing powers of galvanic pile of Volta. — Extr. of letter on galvanism. — Acc. of addit. exper. on galvanic phænomena. — Letter to Mr. Nicholson [on] galvanism. — Galvanic combinations formed by arrangement of single metallic plates and fluids anal. to new galvan. apparatus of Volta. — Outlines of view of galvanism, from course of lectures on galvan. phænomena. — Methods of construct. simple and compound galvan. combin. without use of metallic substances, by means of charcoal and differ. fluids. — Exper. on galvanic electricity made in Theatre of Roy. Inst. — Exper. relating to agencies of galvan. electricity in producing heat, and effecting changes in fluid substances. — Process of galvanism. — New eudiometer. — Method of estimating changes of volume prod. in gases, by alterations of temperature, etc. — Different methods of obtaining gallic acid. — New method of obtaining salts of iron at minimum of oxydation. — Method of copying paintings upon glass and making profiles by agency of light upon nitrate of silver, by T. Wedgewood. — Motions of small pieces of acetate of potash during solution on surface of water. — Constituent parts of some astringent vegetables and their operation in tanning. — Observ. on process of tanning. — Analytical exper. on mineral production from Devonshire, consisting princip. of alumine and water. — Method of analysing stones containing fixed alkali, by means of boracic acid. — Discourse introd. to lectures on chemistry. — Syllabus of [the] lectures. — Outlines of lectures on chem. philosophy. 3. Researches, chem. and philos., chiefly conc. nitrous oxide and its respiration. 4. Elements of chem. philosophy; as regards laws of chem. changes, undecompounded bodies and their primary combinations. 5. Bakerian lectures and miscellaneous papers, 1806-15. Chemical agencies of electricity. — Decomposition of earths, with obs. on metals obtained from alkaline earths and on amalgam proc. from ammonia. — On the nature of alkalies, phosphorus, sulphur, etc. — On metallic bodies, from alkalies and earths, and on some combinations of hydrogen. — Oxymuriatic acid, its nature, etc., with exper. on sulphur and phosphorus. — On a new detonating compound. Letter to Sir J. Banks. — On substances produced in different chemical processes on fluor spar. — New exper. on the fluoric compounds. — On new substance which becomes a violet-colored gas by heat. — Exper. on iodine. — On combustion of the diamond and other carbonaceous substances. — On solid compound of iodine and oxygen. — On the action of acids on salts called hyper-muriates and gases prod. from them. — On anal. between undecompounded substances and constitution of acids. — On prussic basis and acid. — Remarks on note in the 2d number of Journal of sci. and arts. — On aqua-regia, or nitro-muriatic acid. — On fallacy of exper. in which water is said to have been formed by decomp. of chlorine. 6. Miscellaneous papers. On safety lamp for preventing explosions in mines, houses lighted by gas, etc., with researches on flame. — Exper. and observ. on colors used in painting by the ancients. — On papyri found in ruins of Herculaneum. — On cause of diminution of temperature of the sea on approaching land. — On formation of mists in particular situations. — On native caustic lime of Tuscany. — On geology of Cornwall. — On deposit found in water of baths of Lucca. — On state of water in cavities in certain crystals. — Magnetic phenomena prod. by electricity. — Condensation of muriatic acid gas into liquid form. — On application of liquids formed by condensation of gases as mechanical agents. — On corrosion of copper sheathing by sea-water, and methods of preventing this effect. — Addit. exper. on application of electrical combin. to preservation of copper sheathing. — Further researches on preserv. of metals. — Relations of electrical and chemical changes. — On phænomena of volcanoes. — Exper. on the torpedo. 7. Discourses delivered before Roy. Soc. at anniver. meetings on award of Royal and Copley medals. — Sketch of character of Dr. Priestley. — Of Scheele. — Pliny the elder. — Lord Bacon. — Elder Bacon. — Newton. — Cavendish. — Discovery of composition of water. — Eulogy of Mr. Watt. — Journal of tour in Ireland. — Elements of agricultural chemistry. 8. England.

Note. According to the usual practice of this catalogue, under England should be put whatever relates to England alone; under Great Britain whatever relates to the British Isles or to the British Empire. But it has been thought more convenient to bring Antiquities and Eccl. hist. together under England; and to put Biography, History, Peerage, Commerce, Finance, Law, Politics, politico-economical matters, and whatever relates to the government, under Gr. Britain. Agriculture, Architecture, Art, Botany, Costume, Description, etc., are divided. The works on Education apply to England alone. For Language and Literature see English.

Europe.

☞ A large part of the historical works mentioned under various subjects (as Antiquities; — Arts; — Biography; — Christian art; — Commerce; — Ecclesiastical history; — etc.) treat of the history of those subjects in reference to Europe alone, and the remainder are much more occupied with Europe than with the other continents. It will therefore be necessary for a full view of European art, history, etc., to consult the lists under those subjects.
